WHERE SITTING BULL IS WINTERING.—Considerable discussion has recently been placed in some of the newspapers concerning the present whereabouts of young Bull and his band, and they have been located in many different places; sometimes on the Big Horn, and very often away up in British America, in a country which rejoices in the name of "No Man's Land." But all of these surmises and statements, we learn from very good authority (miners and otherwise), are incorrect. Sitting Bull and his followers and entourage are now camped on the Dry Fork of the Missouri, the paradise of buffalo, elk, deer, bear and other game, and in all probability he intends to winter there. So let the Chouteauites be content. Sitting Bull will not trouble them this winter.—[Bozeman Times.]

FOR HIS MARKS.—A small proportion of the miners of the Comstock are unable to read or write. It may be said to the credit of these unfortunate ones, however, that they are painfully anxious to come at their ignorance. On pay-day each miner is required to receipt for his wages. The suits made to avoid this formality by those who cannot write are many and amusing. The most popular and effective dodge is to wrap up the right hand and carry the arm in a sling, so as to a dozen of these sufferers as always to be seen in the line, and they keep it up month after month. Some at last drives many of them to tackle the terrible task of learning to write their names and there are scores who are satisfied with their advance in knowledge.—[Gold Hill News.]

MATIAS ROMERO, when he was in Washington as the Mexican Minister, married an American woman. Lately she eloped from their home, in Mexico, with Clestino Neurante, a journalist, who left a wife behind and took a fortune with him. Romero is a member of the Mexican Congress, and he was informed of his wife's flight just as he was about to deliver an address. He went on with the speech without embarrassment or confusion.

M. Thiers the other day, got off a sly dig at his successor, Marshal MacMahon. "When I was President," he said, "I did not go hunting. I wrote sixteen hours." Said the Marshal, when the news was reported to him: "He loved horses and was a historian by trade. War is my profession and I make war on what I can't hunt."

With the exception of the pyramid of Cheops, the spire of the Strasburg Cathedral, 464 feet in height, has hitherto been the most elevated building in the world. It has now been exceeded by the lately completed spire of the Roman Cathedral, which is 490 feet high.

"Donald," said a Scotch dame, looking up from the Catechism to her son, "what's a slander?" "A slander guide mother," quoth young Donald, twisting the corner of his plaid, "a-well, I hardly ken, unless it be mayhap an ower true tale which one guile woman tells of another."

A bold man made merry at the expense of another who covered his partial baldness with a wig, adding as a clincher, "You see how bald I am, and I don't wear a wig." "True," was the reply, "but an empty barn requires no tatch."

Another English estate has descended to an American heir, the fortunate person in this case being the wife of Dr. J. C. Shilliams, of Clarinda, Iowa, who inherits $3,000,000 left by the Graper family.
